1. Mr. Don Surine, Assistant to Sen. McCarthy, asked me today how the Saturday Evening Post could get material about CIA which the Congress couldn't get. I told him that they didn't get material from us but had merely been digging around. Mr. Surine said the question as to whether Harkness had been able to get anything from CIA was a question which the Senator's committee hoped to have the privilege of asking some of our senior officials under oath in the near future.

2. I talked with Cong. Cole, Chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, and Corbin Allardice, Staff Director, regarding our previous discussions about [REDACTED]

man Cole said that if it was a matter which would be of assistance to CIA he was sure it could be arranged, but that insofar as the necessity of keeping the Committee currently briefed, as Mr. Hitchcock had done, the Department of State was furnishing a man for the trip
